College of Business Living-Learning Community

Program Overview
The College of Business Living-Learning Community (COB LLC) gives first-year Business students a unique residential learning experience that connects classroom learning with residence life. Students enjoy the typical advantages of living on campus in a residence hall with the added benefit of living among other students who share their academic goals and interests.

COB LLC residents will live on a hall together with other Business majors in the COB LLC program, participate in a variety of engaging programs and activities, complete some required Business courses in small groups with other residents in the COB LLC, network with other students in their major, interact with faculty outside of the classroom in informal settings, and gain access to helpful Peer Mentors. The participants move in toward the beginning of move-in days and take part in an off-campus retreat, as well as other Welcome Week activities geared toward adjusting to campus life and making friends.

Program Goals
The COB LLC provides participants with:

• Individualized attention

• Concentration on academic achievement in a productive and supportive environment
• Early and continuous development of leadership skills
• Overall assistance with the transition from high school to college
