Kinesiology Living-Learning Community

Program Overview
The Kinesiology Living-Learning Community is designed to assist intended Kinesiology majors as they pursue their academic goals. Participants in the Kinesiology LLC will have the opportunity to connect and live with other students who share their academic goals and interests. Students will also have greater access to faculty and staff in the kinesiology department, and they will be exposed to a variety of campus resources, leadership and service opportunities, and information regarding their field of study.

The primary objectives of the Kinesiology LLC are to: 1) provide a strong academically supportive environment to help the students be successful their first year at university and 2) create a learning community for intended - Kinesiology majors (exercise physiology, health fitness specialist, sport studies, physical education) that will provide them with an understanding of how to successfully prepare for graduate training or career preparation in the many sub-disciplines of kinesiology and other research-related careers.

Program Goals
The primary goals of the Kinesiology LLC are:
• To aid the students in having academic success their first year at ECU
• To provide students with a more thorough understanding of the many careers that are available to Kinesiology majors and prepare students for graduate training
• To provide students with opportunities to interact with senior level undergraduate & graduate kinesiology majors and with Kinesiology faculty members and other faculty within the college and university
