Business Living Learning Community

The College of Business Living Learning Community gives first-year business students a unique residential learning experience that connects classroom learning with residence life. LLC residents will live on a hall together with other business majors, participate in a variety of engaging activities, complete some required business courses in small groups, network with other students in their major, interact with faculty outside of the classroom in informal settings, and gain access to helpful Peer Mentors.

Peer Mentors are current College of Business students (often former members of the LLC) who serve as mentors or role models to first-year business students. They participate in all College of Business events that are planned for first-year students and the LLC, and hold weekly office hours to meet with their mentees. They provide a student’s perspective and offer valuable insight by sharing their previous experiences.

“The Business LLC was extremely beneficial to me. I quickly gained my close group of friends I have today. I also had classes with those in my LLC and I still have classes with them today. It also was fun and helped me have more of an advantage than other students. It’s helped me in getting to know the COB faculty and Academic Advisors, and it was a great starting point for my freshman year. It definitely made me feel more connected to ECU.” - Duncan Finley
